

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

As the world's population grows, the demand for food and other resources will increase. This will put pressure on the environment and on the world's food supply.

One way to meet this demand is to increase the amount of food that is produced. This can be done by using more land for agriculture, by using more water, or by using more fertilizers.

Another way to meet this demand is to increase the efficiency of food production. This can be done by using better farming techniques, by using better seeds, or by using better fertilizers.

There are many ways to meet the world's growing demand for food and other resources. It is up to us to decide which way is best.

One of the most important things we can do is to make sure that we are using resources wisely. This means that we should not waste food, water, or other resources.

We should also make sure that we are using resources in a way that does not harm the environment. This means that we should not pollute the air, water, or land.

By doing these things, we can help to meet the world's growing demand for food and other resources in a way that is sustainable.

There are many other things we can do to help the world's poor. We can donate money to charities, we can volunteer our time, or we can simply be more aware of the needs of the poor.

By doing these things, we can help to make the world a better place for everyone.
